

Lee Leaves College After 25 Years

[Soundtrack: Ambient music plays for duration of the video.]

[Johnathon Cairns] Yeah so, Lee's a real joker, you know. From day dot, he's been in that kitchen, and he's joined as a kitchen porter.

[Johnathon Cairns] He just wants to learn and wants to do everything. So, he's always ringing up and saying, "Is there any extra hours for me, Johnathon?" and he's just really keen. But you know again, his capability in terms of physical, it could restrict him, but it doesn't. He just does everything better than anyone else because he has that attention to detail to really focus on where he needs to put more of his focus.

[Charlotte Daghish] So, Lee is, again, just an amazing person that you want to surround yourself with people like Lee and I'm quite jealous that the people at the Manor House get to work with him if I'm being honest *laughs*. So, Lee has been in college for twenty-five years, he's now middle-aged, maybe don't put that in *laughs*. So, Lee's been at college for twenty-five years and now that he's in employment thanks to DurhamEnable, he no longer has to attend college and he absolutely loves his job.

[Charlotte Daghish] When I first met him, again, that personality just shone through, he is really good at his job, and I think Manor's really happy to have him because he's a really amazing person to be around as well.
