[Rob's Mother] When Rob was offered a paid role here, he was really happy.

It's something he didn't think he would get, really.

Having to have support when you go to work, it's a big ask but so happy. So proud of himself. All the family are proud of him. Rob holds his head up higher.

When he came for the trial day, loved talking about what he did.

He still does his voluntary work through DurhamEnable. We've carried that on, and he tells us all about what he's done in the day. He's more confident, I think he's got a bit more self-belief.

Him having a purpose of work is going to make us feel that he's being independent. Even with support, he's going to feel that he's achieving something and living a normal life.

[Off camera: Charlotte Daghish] How did it make you feel when you got told that you got the job?

[Rob] Proud of all my family. Very independent and happy.
